

America's Immigrant Children

Immigration has been a constant and defining feature of American life. Children living in immigrant families continue to be a growing segment of the child population of the United States of America. In 2018, one in four—or 18.4 million—children in the United States were born in another country or lived in a family with at least one foreign-born parent. Using data from the KIDS COUNT Data Center, this visualization presents information on the percentage of children living in immigrant families in each state. Each radial column chart (diagram) displays the percentage of children living in immigrant families between 2005 and 2018 in the corresponding state.

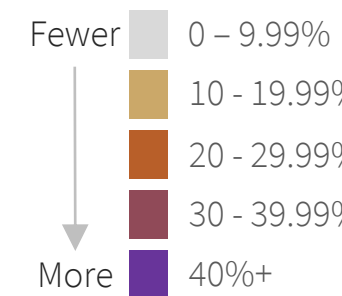

HOW TO READ THIS VISUALIZATION

Each diagram is to be read clockwise, starting at one o'clock (2005) and finishing at twelve (2018). Each bar represents a single year.

Each ring represents 10%, ranging from 0% (innermost ring) to 50% (outermost ring), and the length of each bar is proportional to the percentage it represents.

Each bar is color-coded into ranges, with each color representing a value.
